This seed determines the layout of terrain, structures, and other features in the world. The same seed generates the same world every time, allowing players to share seeds to explore the same world or create specific landscapes.Since Minecraft version 1.18, seeds generate the same terrain and biomes on Java and Bedrock editions, but trees, grass and structures will be different.If it's your own world, then it's easy. For Java Edition: while playing, press T to open the chat, type "/seed" without the quotes, and press ENTER. The game will show the seed. For Bedrock Edition: open world settings, you will find the seed on the Advanced page (or on the Game page if you opened the settings while playing). In the case of server or Realms worlds, if it's not your own server, you can often only find out the seed by asking the server owner.A Minecraft seed map is a visual representation of a Minecraft world generated using a specific seed. It shows the layout of terrain, biomes, structures, and other features of the world, allowing players to preview what the world will look like before actually creating it in the game. Seed maps can help players choose interesting or desirable worlds to explore or build in.Biomes are pretty accurate. Note that the actual shorelines of rivers and oceans do not follow biome boundaries exactly. Structure positions are accurate to within a few blocks, but some structures may be missing, and there may be structures that are not generated in the game. Java structure finding is more accurate than Bedrock because there is more information available about the algorithms. Spawn positions can be completely wrong for some seeds. Java spawn estimation is more accurate than Bedrock.While using a seed map can reveal the locations of biomes or structures like End Portals without the need for exploration or Ender Eyes, whether it's considered cheating is subjective and depends on the player's perspective. Some players enjoy the challenge of finding structures through exploration, while others prefer to use tools like seed maps for convenience. Ultimately, it's up to each player to decide what they consider fair or enjoyable in their gameplay experience.The site uses modern technologies such as WebAssembly, which are not supported by older browsers. Check that you have updated your browser to the latest version. If you are more serious about seeds, need high performance and advanced seed finding features, the open source Cubiomes Viewer desktop app is for you.Fixed trackpad zoom on Apple machines.Added a setting to display a floating tooltip under the mouse cursor showing coordinates and biomes.Fixed false positives for Java Edition Desert Pyramids, Jungle Temples and Woodland Mansions where the terrain is not suitable for the structure.Fixed UI glitches, improved navigation handling.Fixed Java slime chunk inaccuraciesMuch faster multithreaded seed finderFixed map zoom glitchesReworked map image copy and download functions, should work on all modern browsersSwitched to a more modern UI library (Mantine)Added keyboard controls (click on the map, then use the arrow keys to pan and the +/- keys to zoom)Faster initial map loading, smaller download sizesmcseedmap.net on Minecraft Forummcseedmap.net is not an official Minecraft service, and not approved by or associated with Mojang or Microsoft.(c) 2023-2025 mcseedmap.net | Privacy policy Find out hundreds of maps for Minecraft version 1.5.2 generated by incredible Minecraft players. Minecraft (especially the latest version, Minecraft 1.5.2) is a fantastic game with almost unlimited creative potential, but what do you do when you don't feel like remaking the Forbidden Palace in the game, or when a putting together a log cabin just isn't enough to sate your pursuit of fun? After all, there's only so much time you can spend on developing single map. The beauty of Minecraft 1.5.2 is that you don't have to be able to create maps to enjoy the game, for there are already pre-existing maps created by the community in the form of adventure and survival maps that invite players to create their own adventures through pre-made stories developed by storytellers intent on sharing their adventures with the public. You'll find 20 such maps contained within the following pages. #20 Misty Skull This one is a map that heavily features fighting various mobs, and on top of it all comes with an actual story, which is rare for Minecraft maps. It's a pure adventuring map, so no mining or building is allowed. Download Link. This map is based on the Call of Duty Zombies game mode.
