Martin outlined Prince William's agenda, focusing on four key goals: growing income while maintaining value, becoming a net-zero estate by 2032, providing mental health support to tenants and staff, and addressing homelessness in Cornwall.In February, the Duchy announced plans to build a high-quality temporary accommodation complex on its Cornish land in Nansledan, Newquay, as part of a five-year effort to tackle local homelessness. The construction is set to commence in September, with completion expected by late 2025.Prince William received $30 million from the Duchy during the 2023-2024 financial year, making it his first full year seeing the estate's profits. Just as the Royal household has modernized its work to reflect the world we live in today, so too must we bid farewell to outdated practices and focus on being disciplined and forward-thinking in our funding decisions.The Duke of Cornwall has seen his annual expenses covered by a 23.6 million ($30.4 million) surplus from the Duchy of Cornwall, which he inherited when King Charles ascended to the throne in 2022. Prince William, 42, received this amount as part of his role as the Duke of Cornwall and head of the estate, which spans 130,000 acres across 23 counties in England and Wales.The report also highlighted updates to Prince William's patronages, including a shift in his role at The Football Association, where he will now serve as patron. This change reflects his senior position as Prince of Wales. Additionally, he will assume new patronages with the Welsh Guards Charity and the Royal Cornwall Agricultural Association, while becoming president of the Victoria Cross and George Cross Association.The number of staff employed by the Prince and Princess of Wales's household has risen from 50 to 66, including secondees. However, diversity figures show a slight decrease in ethnic minority representation among staff members, with 14 per cent coming from underrepresented backgrounds, down from 16.3 per cent the previous year.Prince William is receiving a pay bump and has taken up more responsibilities concerning his role at The Football Association, where he will now serve as patron instead of president. Previously held by his late grandmother Queen Elizabeth since 2006, this title was replaced after her passing in 2022. Recently, a source close to the Prince mentioned how he's approaching his new title, the Duke of Cornwall, stating that "he is going to very much take an active role in it" and fully immerse himself in it.As a working Royal, William does not receive a fixed annual salary. In comparison, King Charles earns approximately $25 million per year from The Duchy of Lancaster and $30 million from his share of the Sovereign Grant, so there is no indication that he will be pinching pennies at Buckingham Palace.
