Click Here

Nostradamus 2022 predictions in english

In 1555 Michel de Nostradame (better known as simply Nostradamus) published his book Les Prophéties. The book, featuring 942 poetic quatrains, allegedly foretold the future. The famed astrologer has been credited with predicting everything from the rise of Hitler to the shooting of JFK and the September 11th terror attacks. Whether you're a believer or a sceptic, there's no denying that there have been eerie correlations of Nostradamus, and major historical events. But what about the future that is still to come? Here are just a few of Nostradamus' predictions that we should look out for in 2022. Read more about Predictions 2021 was a busy year for Nostradamus' predictions, however, one that has been at the forefront of predictions for the past few years is the threat of an asteroid impacting the Earth. Whether a small meteor shower or a catastrophic extinction-level event, Nostradamus referred to "Fire do I see that from the sky shall fall". In 2021 the Earth did have a near-miss with the Asteroid 2021GW4. The asteroid, measuring 16 feet across, didn't pose much of a threat as it would have most likely broken up into smaller pieces once it hit the Earth's atmosphere. The next near miss, according to NASA, is due to come sometime around 2029. So what does this mean for Nostradamus' predictions? While many interpret that fire raining from the sky could be predicting an astral threat, could it be perhaps something far more man-made? Read more about Mysteries It's very difficult to pin down exact dates with Nostradamus' predictions as they're based on astrological movements. However, one that can be narrowed down to perhaps being due in 2022 is the prediction of war reaching Europe. The invasion of France by a threat from the east is a recurring theme throughout Nostradamus' predictions, but the following predictions it is delightfully vague. Could this prediction be alluding to the breakout of WWIII, or France's qualification into the 2022 Qatar World Cup? Keep an eye out for the team that beats France to see if their kit is white! Read more about Mysteries Another stark possibility that Nostradamus warns against is the rising prices in a failing economy. Nostradamus stated: "No abbots monks, no novices to learn; Honey shall cost far more than candle-wax" "So high the price of wheat, That man is stirred His fellow man to eat in his despair" Political instability, Brexit, and a worldwide pandemic have all contributed to an inflation boom in recent years, but did Nostradamus predict the #eattherich movement? Or is this quatrain to be taken more metaphorically? Either way, it's safe to assume that he was telling us not to be surprised if 2022 is the year that inflation and hunger lead to rebellion. Read more about Mysteries Perhaps not a surprise, given the climate over the past few years, but rising sea temperatures were something that Nostradamus predicted in 1555. "Like the sun the head shall sear the shining sea: The Black Sea's living fish shall all but boil. When Rhodes and Genoa Half-starved shall be The local folk to cut them up shall toil." With global temperatures climbing, sea levels rising, and food chain complications already starting to become apparent, is 2022 going to be the year where temperatures reach breaking point? Perhaps fish won't boil in the sea, but we are already witnessing a mass extinction-level event happening across the globe. The death of coral reefs, decimation of natural habitats, and declining number of fish globally could be a warning sign that Nostradamus' predictions of boiling seas and starving populations are just around the corner. Read more about Mysteries Technology has evolved so much over the last few decades that it's hard to predict what developments will be made one year to the next. This makes it even more impressive that Nostradamus appeared to hypothesise about artificial intelligence almost five decades ago. "The Moon in the full of night over the high mountain, The new sage with a lone brain sees it: By his disciples invited to be immortal, Eyes to the south. Hands in bosoms, bodies in the fire." Artificial intelligence can range from smart speakers and predictive text to facial recognition and self-driving cars. Many experts have issued warnings about the implications of relying too much on technology, especially when it comes to robots. Nostradamus was ahead of this curve with his description of immortal disciples and the potentially negative consequences. If, like me, you like to check your horoscope and blame it for when st hits the fan, then Michel de Nostradame has you covered for the rest of 2022. After having already predicted Russia's invasion of Ukraine as well as Queen Elizabeth II's passing, French astrologer Nostradamus's book Les Prophéties - published in 1555 - has even more in store before the year is out. If there was ever more of a reason to follow a squirrel's lead, collect supplies and hibernate until 2023, then this is it. The war in Ukraine isn't the only conflict Nostradamus predicted taking place by the end of 2022. The astrologer has predicted France will be also invaded. His prediction reads: "Blue-head shall white-head shall white-head shall white-head harm in such degree. As France's good to both shall e'er amount. "However, the line refers to the spring of 2022, so perhaps the astrologer hasn't quite hit the nail on the head this time and France is safe from a potential third world war for now. Chronicle/ Alamy Stock PhotoOne prediction which seems eerily accurate given the cost of living crisis is Nostradamus' prediction of rising prices. "No abbots, monks, no novices to learn; Honey shall cost far more than candle-wax." So high the price of wheat/ That man is stirred/ His fellow man to eat in his despair," he states. Indeed, the cost of living crisis in the UK has seen inflation hit a 30-year high. However, whether we'll all turn to cannibalism because the price of cheese and butter has risen too steeply is debatable. Nostradamus' prediction that the world is going to keep getting warmer has already been proven correct this year. In 1555, the astrologer wrote: "Like the sun the head shall sear the shining sea: The Black Sea's living fish shall all but boil." When Rhodes and Genoa/ Half-starved shall be/ The local folk to cut them up shall toil. "The UK was hit by a series of heatwaves this summer, with temperatures rising to as high as 40°C. There have also recently been devastating floods across the African continent. There's still a few months left for Nostradamus' prediction about artificial intelligence to come true. Despite the astrologer's predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in prediction about artificial intelligence to come true. Despite the astrologer's predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in prediction about artificial intelligence to come true. Despite the astrologer's predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in prediction about artificial intelligence to come true. Despite the astrologer's predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely ahead of his time in predictions having been made over five decades ago, he was definitely and he was The new sage with a lone brain sees it: By his disciples invited to be immortal, Eyes to the south. Hands in bosoms, bodies in the fire," he said. In August, 2022, artificial intelligence of what Australia could look like in only 50 years left people astounded. As if 2022 hadn't been tumultuous already, it could really go out with a bang, as according to Nostradamus an asteroid could be on its way to Earth.Fk the fireworks this New Year's Eve, as the astrologer has predicted, 'Fire [...] from the sky shall fall'. So, Baba Vanga was a blind Bulgarian mystic who many believe could see into the future. She's been called the "Nostradamus of the Balkans". She lost her sight after a tornado accident when she was just 12, and that's when her visions reportedly began. Before her death in 1996, she made hundreds of predictions about the world, and some of them are seriously creepy. She's said to have predicted big events like the election of Barack Obama, the rise of Donald Trump, and even the tragic death of Princess Diana. While not everything she said has come true, the ones that have are hard to ignore. via YouTube So, here are the most terrifying Baba Vanga said, "Horror, horror! The American brethren will fall after being attacked by the steel birds. The wolves will be howling in a bush, and innocent blood will be gushing." Many believe this was a clear warning about the 9/11 attacks. The "steel birds" are thought to be the planes that hit the Twin Towers, and the mention of "bush" is seen as a spooky link to then-president George W. Bush. The Kursk submarine disaster In 1980, Baba Vanga warned that Kursk would be "covered in water and the world will weep over it." Well, at the time, people thought she meant the Russian city of Kursk. But 20 years later, a Russian submarine named Kursk sank in the Barents Sea, killing all 118 sailors. The world did mourn—as she said it would. The rise of Barack Obama and Donald Trump She reportedly said the 44th US President would be a Black man, something that seemed unlikely at the time. But in 2008, Barack Obama made history by winning the presidency. She also predicted a leader who would division across America. The death of Indira Gandhi Years before it happened, Baba Vanga said, "The dress will destroy her. I see an orange-yellow dress in smoke and fire." In 1984, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was shot dead by her own bodyguards. She was wearing a saffron-coloured saree. It was the exact shade Baba Vanga described. Natural disasters in 2022 Baba Vanga warned of extreme weather, draughts, and floods around the world. In 2022, her predictions came true. The UK saw its driest July since 1935, and other parts of Europe battled wildfires and water shortages. Meanwhile, Australia and Asia were hit with severe floods. Sydney got eight months of rain in just four days. Japan also faced serious storms and flood warnings. Her own death In a 1990 interview, Baba Vanga said she would die on August 11, 1996. That's exactly the day she passed away, in Bulgaria, at age 84. She even said a young blind girl in France would inherit her powers. Not sure if that's true, but hopefully she predicts something nicer like peace and harmony for a change. For more like this and for the latest memes, quizzes, updates and general pop culture chaos - like The Tab on Facebook. Featured image via YouTube. In 1555 Michel de Nostradamus) published his book Les Prophéties. The book, featuring 942 poetic quatrains, allegedly foretold the future. The famed astrologer has been credited with predicting everything from the rise of Hitler to the shooting of JFK and the September 11th terror attacks. Whether you're a believer or a sceptic, there's no denying that there have been eerie correlations between the predictions of Nostradamus, and major historical events. But what about the future that is still to come? Here are just a few of Nostradamus' predictions that we should look out for in 2022. Read more about Predictions 2021 was a busy year for Nostradamus' predictions, however, one that has been at the forefront of predictions for the past few years is the threat of an asteroid impacting the Earth. Whether a small meteor shower or a catastrophic extinction-level event, Nostradamus referred to "Fire do I see that from the sky shall fall". In 2021 the Earth did have a near-miss with the Asteroid 2021GW4. The asteroid, measuring 16 feet across, didn't pose much of a threat as it would have most likely broken up into smaller pieces once it hit the Earth's atmosphere. The next near miss, according to NASA, is due to come sometime around 2029. So what does this mean for Nostradamus' predictions? While many interpret that fire raining from the sky could be predictions as they're based on astrological movements. However, one that can be narrowed down to perhaps being due in 2022 is the prediction of war reaching Europe. The invasion of France by a threat from the east is a recurring to the spring of 2022: "Blue-head shall white-head harm in such degree As France's good to both shall e'er amount." Much like all of Nostradamus' predictions it is delightfully vague. Could this prediction be alluding to the breakout of WWIII, or France's qualification into the 2022 Qatar World Cup? Keep an eye out for the team that beats France to see if their kit is white! Read more about Mysteries Another stark possibilit ythat Nostradamus warns against is the rising prices in a failing economy. Nostradamus stated: "No abbots, monks, no novices to learn; Honey shall cost far more than candle-wax" "So high the price of wheat, That man is stirred His fellow man to eat in his despair" Political instability, Brexit, and a worldwide pandemic have all contributed to an inflation boom in recent years, but did Nostradamus predict the #eattherich movement? Or is this quatrain to be taken more metaphorically? Either way, it's safe to assume that he was telling us not to be surprised if 2022 is the year that inflation and hunger lead to rebellion. Read more about Mysteries Perhaps not a surprise, given the climate over the past few years, but rising sea temperatures were something that Nostradamus predicted in 1555. "Like the sun the head shall sear the shining sea: The Black Sea's living fish shall but boil, When Rhodes and Genoa Half-starved shall be The local folk to cut them up shall toil," With global temperatures climbing, sea levels rising, and food chain complications already starting to become apparent, is 2022 going to be the year where temperatures reach breaking point? Perhaps fish won't boil in the sea, but we are already witnessing a mass extinction-level event happening across the globe. The death of coral reefs, decimation of natural habitats, and declining number of fish globally could be a warning sign that Nostradamus' predictions of boiling seas and starving populations are just around the corner. Read more about Mysteries Technology has evolved so much over the last few decades that it's hard to predict what developments will be made one year to the next. This makes it even more impressive that Nostradamus appeared to hypothesise about artificial intelligence almost five decades ago. "The Moon in the full of night over the high mountain, The new sage with a lone brain sees it: By his disciples invited to be immortal, Eyes to the south. Hands in bosoms, bodies in the fire." Artificial intelligence can range from smart speakers and predictive text to facial recognition and self-driving cars. Many experts have issued warnings about the implications of relying too much on technology, especially when it comes to robots. Nostradamus was ahead of this curve with his description of immortal disciples and the potentially negative consequences. RevealedBAD NEW YEAR FROM the death of a dictator to cataclysmic quakes, Nostradamus is believed to have predicted dire events for 2022. The French philosopher wrote 6,338 prophecies, suggesting when, where and how our world will dramatically end. 8Nostradamus's predictions, such as the rise to power of Adolf Hitler, World War II, the September 11 terrorist attack, the French Revolution and the development of the atomic bomb have been interpreted as being accurate. Nostradamus also appeared to have predicted the start of the coronavirus pandemic of 2020, according to believers. According to Yearly-Horoscope, more than 70 per cent of his prophecies have been fulfilled so far. The French astrologer died on July 2, 1566. But his prophecies have continued to amaze those who follow his work. Here's what Nostradamus believers have interpreted from the entries in his book concerning 2022. DEATH OF KIM JONG-UNAccording to the interpreters of the prophecies, Nostradamus may also have predicted the death of North Korean dictator Kim-Jong Un. In the 14th quatrain of Centuria IV, he wrote: "The sudden death of the first character of the leader is Kim amid his dramatic weight loss and consistent rumours about his health. The North Korean despot had not been seen for some time since a huge missile exhibition in October — his longest absence for seven years. He reappeared again on November 15 - but it only fueled longrunning speculation about his health. 8Will Kim Jong-un die in 2022?DISASTROUS EARTHQUAKEThe third quatrain of Nostradamus' Centuria III is believed to forecast a huge earthquake in Japan, in 2022. He wrote: "Towards midy extreme siccity / In the depths of Asia they will say earthquake." Indeed, if a quake did happen in the middle of the day it could wreak terrible damage and death. On October 7, an earthquake estimated at a magnitude of 5.9 at its epicenter rattled the greater Kanto region. While the damage was minimal, it was the strongest to hit Japan's capital since the earthquake and aftershocks of the temblor that devastating earthquake is predicted to hit JapanWAR IN EUROPEOne of Nostradamus' prophecies for the coming year directly concerns Paris, according to some interpretations. The French capital would be under siege - suggesting a war in Europe. The section referring to this reads: "All around the great City / Will be soldiers lodged by fields and cities." Chaotic scenes have already come to the streets of the French capital this year amid riots over Covid restrictions. And of course Paris was infamously attacked in 2015 by ISIS terrorists who killed 130 people. It was the deadliest attack on France since World War 2. 8Police run past a burning car as they push protesters back during a 'yellow vests' demonstration near the Arc de TriompheMIGRATION CRISISNostradamus wrote: "Of blood and hunger greater calamity. Seven times appreste to the marine beach / Monech of hunger, place taken, captivity. "This has been interpreted to mean wars and armed conflicts in the world will probably only increase hunger. Therefore it will increase hunger to the beaches of Europe than normal. Immigration continues to be a major political debate in the UK and Europe, especially following the deaths of 27 people in the European Union - which has been racked by trouble since the UK voted Brexit in 2016. It reads: "Sacred temples prime Roman style / Will reject the goffes foundations." Interpreters point to the Treaty of Rome, ratified in 1957, essentially founded the Union. According to Nostradamus, it is claimed, Brexit was only the beginning, and the whole European Union was fated to collapse in 2022. It has already been suggested Poland could be the first country to follow the UK out of the bloc after a row between Warsaw and Brussels. 8 Prophecies of Nostradamus (1503-1566), 1566 edition. "Centurie ASTEROIDIn 2021, an especially prominent prediction was that some sort of asteroid would hit the earth." Fire do I see that from the sky shall fall," the astrologer wrote. The earth did have a near miss with Asteroid 2021GW4 this year, though it wasn't considered too much of a threat by NASA, and didn't exactly fit the astrologer's dramatic prediction. 8Nostradamus conjured up quite a few predictions for 2022, from a crypto spike to war and starvation to robots and asteroids Credit: GettyROBOTSAmong Nostradamus' predictions for 2021 is also the rise of artificial intelligence. He wrote: "The Moon in the full of night over the high mountain / The new sage with a lone brain sees it: By his disciples invited to be immortal, Eyes to the south. Hands in bosoms, bodies in the fire." As modern artificial intelligence becomes more advanced each year, this warning about immortal disciples takes on a very real meaning. 8Among Nostradamus' predictions for 2021 is also the rise of artificial intelligence Credit: GettyWe pay for your stories! Do you have a story for The US Sun team? In 1555 Michel de Nostradamus (better known as simply Nostradamus) published his book Les Prophéties. The book, featuring 942 poetic quatrains, allegedly foretold the future. The famed astrologer has been credited with predicting everything from the rise of Hitler to the shooting of JFK and the September 11th terror attacks. Whether you're a believer or a sceptic, there's no denying that there have been eerie correlations between the predictions of Nostradamus, and major historical events. But what about the future that is still to come? Here are just a few of Nostradamus' predictions, however, one that has been at the forefront of predictions for the past few years is the threat of an asteroid impacting the Earth. Whether a small meteor shower or a catastrophic extinction-level event, Nostradamus referred to "Fire do I see that from the sky shall fall". In 2021 the Earth did have a near-miss with the Asteroid 2021GW4. The asteroid, measuring 16 feet across, didn't pose much of a threat as it would have most likely broken up into smaller pieces once it hit the Earth's atmosphere. The next near miss, according to NASA, is due to come sometime around 2029. So what does this mean for Nostradamus' predictions? While many interpret that fire raining from the sky could be predicting an astral threat, could it be perhaps something far more man-made? Read more about Mysteries It's very difficult to pin down exact dates with Nostradamus' predictions as they're based on astrological movements. However, one that can be narrowed down to perhaps being due in 2022 is the prediction of war reaching Europe. The invasion of France by a threat from the east is a recurring theme throughout Nostradamus' predictions, but the following prediction is speculated to be referring to the spring of 2022: "Blue-head shall white-head sh Qatar World Cup? Keep an eye out for the team that beats France to see if their kit is white! Read more about Mysteries Another stark possibilit ythat Nostradamus warns against is the rising prices in a failing economy. Nostradamus stated: "No abbots, monks, no novices to learn; Honey shall cost far more than candle-wax" "So high the price of wheat, That man is stirred His fellow man to eat in his despair" Political instability, Brexit, and a worldwide pandemic have all contributed to an inflation boom in recent years, but did Nostradamus predict the #eattherich movement? Or is this guatrain to be taken more metaphorically? Either way, it's safe to assume that he was telling us not to be surprised if 2022 is the year that inflation and hunger lead to rebellion. Read more about Mysteries Perhaps not a surprise, given the climate over the past few years, but rising sea temperatures were something that Nostradamus predicted in 1555. "Like the sun the head shall sear the shining sea: The Black Sea's living fish shall all but boil. When Rhodes and Genoa Half-starved shall be The local folk to cut them up shall toil." With global temperatures climbing, sea levels rising, and food chain complications already starting to become apparent, is 2022 going to be the year where temperatures reach breaking point? Perhaps fish won't boil in the sea, but we are already witnessing a mass extinction-level event happening across the globe. The death of coral reefs, decimation of natural habitats, and declining number of fish globally could be a warning sign that Nostradamus' predictions of boiling seas and starving populations are just around the corner. Read more about Mysteries Technology has evolved so much over the last few decades that it's hard to predict what developments will be made one year to the next. This makes it even more impressive that Nostradamus appeared to hypothesise about artificial intelligence almost five decades ago. "The Moon in the full of night over the high mountain, The new sage with a lone brain sees it: By his disciples invited to be immortal, Eyes to the south. Hands in bosoms, bodies in the fire." Artificial intelligence can range from smart speakers and predictive text to facial recognition and self-driving cars. Many experts have issued warnings about the implications of relying too much on technology, especially when it comes to robots. Nostradamus was ahead of this curve with his description of immortal disciples and the potentially negative consequences.