

How to add music bot to discord group

In the last five years, Discord has consistently shown that it is the instant messaging platform for not only players, but anyone looking for messages, video chats, or streaming with friends online. Among the reasons why: Discord bots. Bots can help you do everything to automate world activities to start playing music through the server, and in this tutorial, we will show you how to make a Discord bot. Although automation is the main reason to use a Discord bot, you can really program one to do something (something that you can really program one to use a Discord bot, you can really program one to use a Discord bot. Discord bots, even if you've never touched a code line before. Step 1: Download Node is and configure a Discord Node is account is a JavaScript runtime that is free and open source, and you will need it to actually do your job bot. Download it on node is account is a JavaScript runtime that is free and open source, and you will need it to actually do your job bot. Discord account, and your server to use to test your bot. If you have one, sign in to your account and open the server where you want your bot to live. You will also need a text editor program, such as Notepad++ on Windows, to encode with. Step 2: Create your bot Now you need to create an "application" on Discord to make your work bot. It takes a while, It's not too complex. The goal here is to get a "authorization token" for the bot on its servers. First, head to discord app.com / developers / applications / me. Your account should be connected, so you will go directly to the application list of your account. Hit the new application to start. Give a name to the bot, then press the button marked Save Changes. Now, in the right menu, click Bot. Once in the new menu, click Add Bot under the Build-a-Bot option. If you have only one question — the one we just made — should appear automatically. Otherwise, select it. Step 3: Get the bot authorization token In the box marked App Bot User, search the Token words: Click that link and you will reveal a text string. This is the bot authorization token, which allows you to send the code. Do not share it with anyone — that token allows anyone to create the code for the bot, which means that anyone can control your bot. If you think the token has been compromised, the good news is that you can easily generate a new Token button. Mark your token. You'll need it in a moment. Step 4: Send your bot to your server Now scroll to the marked app details box and find your customer ID, a long number. Copy the number and add it to this URL, in the place of the word CLIENTID. The final URL with the number of client ID in it in the browser. This will take you to a website where you can tell Discord where to send your bot. You will know that it worked if you open Discord in an app or your browser and navigate on your server. The channel will say that a bot entered the room, and you will see it on the right-side menu under the list of online members. Step 5: Create a 'Bot' folder on your computer While you're doing it, you can also take a time to create a folder in an easy place to reach on your computer where you can store all your bot files. Call it something simple, like "DiscordBot" or "MyBot", so you know exactly what it is. Step 6: Open the text editor and do the bot files You are going to create three files for your bot from your text editor. In the first, paste this code: { "token": "Your Bot Token" } Replace "Your Bot Token" with the token you have generated previously on the bot application page. Make sure that the token you did on your desktop, using the file name "auth.json." Remember not to save as .txt file — it will not work if it is .txt instead of json Make a new file and enter this code: { "name": "greeter-bot", "1.0.0", "description": "My First Discord Bot", "main": "bot.js", "author": "Your Name", "dependence": } Replace the author's name with you can also change the description to something else if you want; you can also change the description to something else if you want; what you are doing, which will be useful to remember what your bot should do. Save this file as "package.json" in the Discord bot folder. Step 7: Defining the bot. You want to be familiar with JavaScript to really have full control of your bot and know what you're doing, but if you're new to coding and just want to do something, you can copy and paste this code into the file to make a simple bot that will welcome you in your server. (Thanks to the average user Renemari Padillo, whose bot tutorial helped us create this. Check your code troubleshooting tutorial and other tips.) var Discord = require('discord.io'); var logger = request('winston'); var auth = request('./auth.json'); // Configure logger settings.remove(logger.transports. Console, { colorize: true }); logger. level = "debug"; // Initialize Discord Bot var bot = new Discord. Client({ token: auth.token, autorun: true }); bot.on('ready', function (evt) { logger.info('Connected'); logger.info(bot.username + ' -'bot.id + ')'); }); bot.on('message, evt) {/Our robot must know if it will execute a command//He will listen to messages that will start with `!` if (message.substring(0, 1) = '!') { var args = message.substring(1).split('); var cmd = args[Just add any case command if you want..? This code sets a Discord bot that will respond to certain messages: In particular, anything that begins with a "!" character. In particular, we're planning the bot to answer the "!intro" command, so if someone types that in your server while the bot is in it, the bot will respond with a scheduled message. In our code, we defined the message as "Greetings! Welcome to the server!" You can edit both the request message by redefining them in the code above. Just make sure you keep individual guotation marks around the message. Save this last text file as "bot.js" in the Discord bot folder. Step 8: Open the computer "Command Prompt" and switch to the bot folder Discord On a Windows icon and typing Command Prompt in the field. Once opened, type "cd" followed by the file path in the folder. On our test computer, the command looks like this: "c:UsersPhil'sThis should change the command prompt row to include the file path in the folder. Alternatively, you can browse the folder in Windows and hold Shift while right-clicking on an empty area of the folder, and choosing Open Command Prompt. Step 9: Use the Command Prompt to install the dependencies of the bot Now is the time to use Node.js. In the Command Prompt, with the Discord bot folder in the files needed for the Discord bot in the folder directly. Also use the following command line prompt to install additional dependencies: npm install This should provide all the files you need. Step 10: Run the bot now you're ready to go. To try to run the bot, type "node bot.js" in the command prompt (make sure you are still navigated in the Discord bot folder). To test the functionality of the bot, go back to your Discord server and try to type "!intro," or "!", followed by the message you created in your "bot, is" file. If you have correctly encoded the bot, sending this command will make you answer the bot with the set message. Congratulations, you are the proud creator of a Discord bot. Step 11: Find out if your bot was made by someone else The great thing about Discord is the community of shared interest and skills. Users on Discord are always making new tools forservice, including bots. Some creators upload their bots to public databases can have a variety of codified functions in them, so you'll probably be able to find what you need. Before doing the bot, do some exploring on Discord to see if someone else has already done just the bot you need. You can search Google for databases, as well as specific bots Discord. You can also try to watch Top.gg (ex Discordbots) or Bots.ondiscord.xyz. how to add music bot to discord group chat. how to add music bot to discord use of the bot you need. chat. how to add music to discord bot
