Download lesson as PDF and consonant vowels are two types of letters in the English alphabet. A vocal sound is created when the air flows smoothly, without interruption, through the throat and mouth. Voice sounds are produced as a speaker changes the shape and placement of articulators (parts of the throat and mouth). On the contrary, consonant sounds occur when the air flow is obstructed or interrupted. If this sounds confusing, try to make the sound āċ œPāċ and the sound āċ œkāċ ". You will notice that in the creation of sound you manipulated your mouth and tongue to briefly interrupt the air flow from the throat. Consonant sounds have a distinct start and end, while the vocal flow sounds. The pronunciation ofVoice is determined by the voice position in a syllable and by the following letters. Voice sounds can be short, long or silent. If a word contains only one voice and this voice appearsMiddle of the word, the vowel is usually pronounced as a brief vocal. This is especially true if the word is very short. Examples of short vowels in ā ċ
