If you do not have access to Microsoft Excel, you can try our Tournament Bracket Creator or our Fillable Tournament Brackets . My family loves filling out brackets for March Madness, and I love spreadsheets. I'm going to share with you my two favorite spreadsheets for this time of year. Besides Dakota Wesleyan, I don't watch college basketball all that closely. When I make picks, nostalgia and personal bias influences my picks. Even is I was knowledgeable and unbiased, how do you account for the Cinderella stories? I account for them by just looking at the straight statistics. About 7% of the time, the 15 Seed beats the 2 Seed. The 8 Seed beats the 9 Seed 51% of the time. All these stats have been accumulated by McCubed so that all I have to do is plug them into a spreadsheet and run a random number generator. Et voila! Bonus: If my bracket does horrible, I blame the random number generator. If my bracket does well, I take credit for creating the spreadsheet. This spreadsheet works for a small pool (less than 10 people). This one uses two different scoring systems which might doubles my odds of winning? You need to be fairly good at data entry to use this one. Scoring System 1: This is a traditional method where you get 1 point for correct guesses for Round 1, 2 points for correct guesses in Round 2, and so forth. This system usually rewards those that play it safe with their picks. Scoring System 2: The alternate scoring system gives you points based on seeding. 15 points for correctly picking the 15 Seed to win. This is then multiplied by Round so if you correctly guess the 15 Seed to win in Round 2, you get 30 points. If you correctly guess the 2 Seed to win in Round 2, you get 4 points. This system rewards the lucky risk taker. I linked both spreadsheets below and offer a quick overview in the video. Enjoy! Each bracket includes the option to use tournament seeds or a random start. You can also hide or display the recommended game order to balance the playing load of any one team. Single Elimination Tournament Bracket for Excel 1 Excel For: Excel 2010 or later License: Private Use (not for distribution or resale) Description This printable single-elimination bracket template includes a number of different sheets to support a wide number of teams, including any number between 3 and 16 as well as 20, 24, 30 and 32 teams. Each tournament bracket has the option to use tournament seeds and to display or hide game numbers. After we upload the new bracket with the 2019 information, the bracket will be ready to go. Just enjoy the games and enter the final scores to keep the bracket updated. To start an office pool, hand out copies of the bracket to participants and have them write in their bracket picks. Make sure you give them ample time to make their picks, even if it won't really help them do any better. :- ) Enter picks into the pool worksheet. Use the game numbers on the bracket and the table to line up the proper games. Keep the bracket updated with scores and the pool will be updated too. Consider placing the spreadsheet where everyone can see the current leaders. Sit back and enjoy the tournament, and pray that your underdogs really do win. Tips for Putting on a Tournament If you aren't sure how many teams you are going to have in your tournament, print out multiple brackets or print out a bracket that will handle them all. Use BYEs to fill in empty starting positions if teams fail to show up or the bracket is slightly larger than needed. Print the bracket on a large plotter (most copy centers will have one) if you want to post it for everyone to see. Or, use a projector and a laptop to display the bracket on a wall so that everyone can see how the tournament is progressing. Make sure you have ample time to complete your tournament, especially if court or field space is limited. A single draw-out game can mess up an entire tournament schedule. Make sure you include enough time in between games to allow for the longer games.
