something green, something red, item of clothing, places to visit, December activities. See Christmas Scattergories for a list of words from A to Z for each of the categories above. Birthday Scattergories above. Birthday Scattergories PDF File Image Before you can play Scattergories, you need to set up the game. You will need at least one other player, but three or more is preferable since games with only two players tend to take longer. Your game box should contain six cardboard folders and six copies of the 13 category cards, a pad with answer sheets divided into columns for the three rounds, a D20 (twenty-sided die), and an hourglass timer. Additionally, each player will need a pencil or other writing implement, and you need a flat tabletop or another level surface to roll your die. Each player needs one answer sheet, one cardboard folder, and a copy of each category card. Next, select the first three lists so everyone works from the same list each round. It's vital to ensure these are in the same order. Begin by rolling your die to determine the first letter of your first round. You will note that the die has letters instead of numbers. Since it only has 20 sides, the letters Q, U, V, X, Y, and Z have been omitted. There aren't enough words starting with these letters to fill some categories. Interesting Fact: Some older editions of Scattergories included small pencils and a board for rolling your dice. However, the current iteration only has the components listed above since most players have tables and writing implements readily available. How to Play Scattergories Set up the game so each player works from the same list. Determining who rolls first is up to you. We recommend rolling for it, and whoever gets the earliest letter in the alphabet (A, B, C, etc.)
goes first, then play clockwise. The first player rolls and then flips the timer. All players fill the first column with the letter rolled. When the timer runs out, everyone puts their pencils down. Beginning with the player who rolled, each person will read off their answers. Any word that someone else chose is invalid. Circle only the answers that do not match what the other players read aloud. After the last player reads, everyone can tally their scores. You get one point for each unique word. Repeat this process for the next two rounds using lists 2 and 3. Add your three different round scores together. Whoever has the most points wins. Pro Tip: In case of a tie, the players who got the same high score roll and have a run-off round. Whoever gets the high score wins, and you can have as many run-offs as necessary. Scattergories Rules Valid words or phrases must begin with the rolled letter. This is called the Key Letter. If you can name someone or something with a multi-word name where all the first letters match the rolled letter, you get one point for each word. For example, if the category was fictional men and the letter you rolled was J, you would score one point for The Joker but four points if you put down John Jonah Jameson Junior. You can only use a word once per game. Articles do not count as words. If your title begins with "A,"
"An," "The," or a similar term, then start with the second word's first letter. For example, "The Hunger Games" begins with "H" for the purposes of this game. You must reroll if you roll a letter already used in a previous round. This helps prevent players from using the same word twice. Both first and last names count, and you may use either to indicate a person. For example, if the category was Comic Characters and the letter was P, you could list Peter Parker as either Peter or Parker, but not both. Tips for Better Play You can use 'creative' answers that push the limits of the category definition. For example, if the category is Stars and the letter is C, then you could say "Chris Evans," "Cher," "Tim Curry," or "Castor" (a star in the Gemini constellation). When playing with people with mobility issues, you may want to extend the timer to 5 minutes so they can write everything down. Always start by answering every category you can. Skipping answers won't help you, and there's no penalty for being wrong. Anything can be a category. If you add lists, as many players do, remember that anything can be a category, but you need to choose options with a plethora of optional answers. Overly specific categories make the game less fun. How Long is the Scattergories Timer is three minutes long. If you think fast, this is enough time to fill out a column on your sheet. However, it's important to remember that you can't simply pick the most obvious answer every time and expect to win. Coming up with unique but relevant solutions in just three minutes is more challenging than it first seems. Scattergories The original Scattergories game, copyrighted by Milton Bradley in 1988, has twelve lists, each with twelve categories for a total of a hundred and forty-four starting categories. Additionally, game fans have taken it upon themselves to create and share numerous homemade categories. The original categories are listed below to help you avoid unnecessary duplicates if you decide to make your own lists. 4-letter words A boy's name A

However, it would be best if you remembered that the potential answers should always be as wide-ranging as possible. Your subject has to be open-ended enough to have multiple answers starting with almost every letter of the alphabet. You can choose a niche subject like Opera Singers of the 1990s or Names of Actors and Actresses who have been in 007 Movies to customize your game for the group you are playing with and still offer plenty of potential options for savvy players. Remember that those niche categories are only useable if the group you are playing with has a good general knowledge of the subject. Adding Mythological Creatures works well for many groups, but Legends of the Balkans is too specific for most groups. Don't tailor questions to one individual's knowledge base; instead, offer subjects everyone at the table is likely to know the answer for. The lists in Scattergories are very straightforward. Each list needs twelve categories, and you need enough copies of each list so all the players have one. Ensuring that players of this highly entertaining and and rewarding since you can add silly options, more challenging levels, and other new ideas to keep it fresh and exciting. There is no limit to how many lists you can create. If you and your friends or family love word games, Scattergories is an excellent game-night addition to any table. Knowing words is a start, but it's not enough to get a high score.
You'll have to get creative to have the best unique answers every round. Watch out, though. The timer is ticking, and you're playing against other people who could guess the same word. Scattergories, like many timeless classic games, is a simple idea that requires little set-up time and only a few rules to play, yet it remains challenging for players of any age. Printable Scattergories lists are a valuable resource for anyone who enjoys the thrill of word games and wants to elevate their game night experience. Scattergories is a creative-thinking category-based party game originally published by Milton Bradley in 1988. The objective of the 2-to-6-player game is to score points by uniquely naming objects, people, actions, and so forth within a set of categories, given an initial letter, within a time limit. The game is based on a traditional game called Categories. The game is played in sets of 3 rounds. Each player takes a folder with an answering pad and three category cards. Each sheet in the answer pad has three columns of 12 blank lines. In addition, the category cards have four lists, each with 12 unique categories, for a total of 144 categories in the game. In new versions of the game, each card has two lists of 12 unique categories, for a total of 16 lists and 192 categories. All players must agree on the list to use. A 20-sided letter die is rolled to determine the first letter used. The timer is set for up to three minutes. In the time allotted, each player must attempt to write down one word or term for each of the 12 categories that starts with the rolled letter. Any number of words in the answer is allowed as long as the first word starts with the correct letter. Alliteration is encouraged with proper nouns in one game variation (e.g., Ronald Reagan is worth 2 points, and Hubert Horatio Humphrey is worth 3).[3] All players stop writing when the timer is finished and the answers are shared. Players score zero points for an answer that duplicates another answer in that round, and one point for each word using the letter. (In the "Junior" version, players earn two points for an answer that begins with the chosen letter, and one point for an answer that does not begin with the chosen letter, but no points for a duplicate answer. If the vote is a tie, the vote is a tie, the vote of the player who is being challenged is thrown out. In the case of proper nouns, all parts of the answer will be counted as adequate provided one begins with the letter in play. For example, if the category is "U.S. presidents" and the round letter is "S", an acceptable answer would be "Harry S. Truman" because his middle initial is the letter S. Martin Sheen, however, was never a U.S. president and therefore is not a valid answer, rewarding zero points. (This rule does not apply to book titles.) Broad interpretation is allowed for fun and creative gameplay. For example, in the case of things commonly cooked in kitchen around the world) are acceptable answers. The Scattergories 20-sided die includes the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, R, S, T, and W and excludes the letters Q, U, V, X, Y, and Z. In 1989, Milton Bradley published a "refill" pack for Scattergories. It consisted of 18 cards with 144 new categories and contained 6 new answer pads.[4] In 2008 Winning Moves Games USA published Scattergories The Card Game. It is a fast-playing, portable game of Scattergories. (It is not a booster pack.) The game includes a deck of letter cards, a deck of category deck and the first person to shout out a correct answer takes a card. For example, an S card is turned over and "The Beach" is turned over and says "I know! Sand", that player claims either card and says "I know! Sand", that player claims either card and turns over a new letter or subject card (depending on what they claimed.) The game ends when one entire deck is exhausted. The player with the most cards wins. In January 2010, Puzzlewright Press published Scattergories Word Search Puzzles by Mark Danna, a former associate editor at Games magazine. Sanctioned by Hasbro, this book provides Scattergories players with a way to play a solitaire version of the game with the following variations: write down two answers, not just one, for ever category; instead of coming up with unique answers, try to match answers, which are hidden in the word search; score bonus points by matching answers hidden in the word search grid's leftover letters. There are no rounds. Players try to beat their most recent or their best score. Categories in the book are based on the ones in the board game but have modifications. There are 60 puzzle games in all. In 2010, Winning Moves Games USA published Scattergories Categories, which is a twist on classic Scattergories focuses on one category per round and players race to find a unique answer starting with each letter in the category key word, which is related to the category in some way. As the game box shows, if the category word is "CAMPING TRIP" players have 2 minutes to find a word that starts with a C, then an A, then an M, and a P and so on. Players get 1 point for each unique answer and the first player to 25 points wins. The game contains 250 word challenges on 125 cards for players 12 and up. In 2019, Winning Moves Games USA published Scattergories 30th Anniversary Edition. It is a classic reproduction of the original 1989 edition.
