

Road trips are a lot of fun, but theres no denying that long car journeys can get a bit boring. To help pass the time on these road trips, weve rounded up some of our favourite car games, which are perfect for keeping kids entertained on long drives. 1. The picnic gameThis is a memory-based alphabet game that requires you to pay close attention to both what you and those around you say. One player starts off with the line I went to a picnic and brought followed by an object beginning with B. You can also try the shopping list car game same idea but I went shopping and bought which increases the potential for imaginative items. We fix 8 out of 10 cars at the roadside. 2. The word association gameOne person starts this car game by saying a word, then the next person one says grass, person two says leaf and person three says tree. Quick-thinking is key the faster you go, the more fun the gameone by saying a word, then the next person says a word that related to it and so on. For example, person says a word that selated to it and so o is.3. The banana gameIn this driving game, points are awarded to whoever spots a vehicle with all or part of it in yellow.Add to the fun by awarding different points for specific cars, trucks, lorries, motorcycles and taxis. Planning on driving to Europe soon? Read our guide to driving abroad.4. Pub cricketBetter for A- and B-roads than motorways, the aim of this car game is to spot pubs along your road trip, and successfully count how many arms and legs are in each name. For example, the Horse and Jockey would score 4 (2 arms and 2 legs) and The Coach and Horses would score 12 (Two horses and one driver equals 10 legs and 2 arms). Any time you spot a pub with no arms or legs in the name, youre out and the next batter is up.5. Name that tuneFor this driving game, someone simply hums or whistles a song and the rest of the car have to guess what it is. Whoever guesses the song name and artist correctly gets a point. For the extra competitive, you could add bonus points for naming the year the song was written and what album it was from. Check out our guide to the best places to stop on a road trip.6. The number plate game for long car journeys and sparking the kids' imaginations. Everyone chooses a passing car and memorises the last three letters of the number plate. Then you make up a story with the letters. Use the first letter to decide the name of the main character, the second letter could be an item or animal in the story, and the third letter can help you decide what the characters doing. 7. Car colour raceA simple but fun car game for the whole family, it works by everyone choosing a colour and counting the number of cars of their colour that drive past. First person to spot 10 cars of their colour and shout out wins. Planning on driving game requires a little bit of preparation before you set off on your car journey. Make a list (or a picture card for younger children) of things you might see on your journey - for example, sheep, horses, cows or an AA van. Children simply cross off their score cards as they spot each item. The first person to score off every item on their card and shout bingo wins.9. Never miss a beatAll you need for this car game is some music. Put on a song which everyone knows and start singing along, then turn the volume down for 10 seconds but carry on singing. Turn the volume back up and see how you're all getting on. Are you in time or a bit off the beat? The winner is the person who manages to sing perfectly in time when the music starts playing again. Whether driving on a road trip, going to a restaurant, or taking kids to a sports practice, here are fun games to play in the car! Some your eyes, some with your words, and others paper and pencil. All of these fun games to play will keep the people in the car (kids) entertained and thinking! Note: We dont allow the game punch buggy because someone can get hurt. LICENSE PLATE GAME2 or more playersOn a car ride, spot license plates from different states. Whoever sees a particular state calls it out and records it on their U.S. map. TWENTY QUESTIONS / I SPY2 or more playersOne person spots something for the other players to guess. The person says, I spy with my little eye, something _____ (blue). Now, the other players must ask yes or no questions to determine what that something is. Is it round? Alternatively, you can play the traditional 20 questions game by thinking of objects that are vegetables, minerals, or animals. Other players ask yes or no questions. ALPHABET GAME2 or more playersLook out the window for road signs. Look for something that starts with each letter of the alphabet, starting with A and find the next letters of the alphabet in the correct alphabetical order (insert the letter)! Variation: Find the alphabet on license plates only. WOULD YOU RATHER2 or more playersLooking for easy games to play in the car, try Would You Rather! One person thinks of two silly or gross questions to ask the other people in the car, starting with the prompt, Would you rather Or use a card using road signs. Say, I spy game to get started. Or use picture books! HANGMAN2 or more playersOne player thinks of a word and writes a line for each letter, then draws a gallows. (Its not a bad idea to give some adult help on this step.) The other players try to guess the letters in the word, one letter at a time. Each incorrect letter means the drawing player draws a body part on the gallows. The object is to guess the word before you get hung, which is when youve drawn a full-body picture on the gallows. TIC-TAC-TOE2 playersNo explanation is needed, right? But, just in case you forgot how to play, draw a grid of 33 = 9 spaces. The first person chooses which shape, x or o, to play and draws that shape. The second player draws their shape. The goal is to draw three in a row to win. BOXES2 playersDraw a grid of dots in rows and columns. Each player takes turns drawing a line between any two adjacent dots. If you make a square with your line, write your initials in that box. Once all the dots are connected, the person with the most boxes wins. Example here. MORSE CODE2 or more playersPrint out the code and have your kids make secret messages in Morse Code. PENCIL RUBBINGS1 personPut coins, keys, or a comb under the paper and rub with the side of the pencil. Note: you might need some wet wipes handy afterward. Make it an adventure to remember by keeping everyone occupied along the way, with loads of laughs and a bit of thinking to keep you all alert and excited. Weve put together a list of the best road trip games for families to help make your journey extra special! When it comes to roadtrip games, there are plenty of great options that require absolutely no prepare ahead of time (and arent just in the car right now Googling for ideas), weve got a few extra options for you that do require a little more effort and preparation. Games can be a great way to keep kids entertained on long journeys. Not only do they provide a fun diversion, but they can also help break up the monotony of the journey. Choose Wisely Make sure to choose games that are easy to pack and dont require a lot of set-up, small pieces or clean-up. Plan ahead If youre bringing along some physical games, pack them in a bag thats easy to access and wont take up too much space in the car. If your road trip game entertainment, make sure you have enough battery power and/or data left to last the entire trip. Get everyone involved One of the best things about playing games on road trips is that everyone can join in on the fun, regardless of age or ability. No-prop road trip car games can also help keep the driver alert during long stretches of road! Our favourite family games to play in the car are definitely the ones that dont require you to bring anything with you. They are also good games to play while driving so that even the driver can (safely) join the fun without distracting from the road. We have a few that we play anytime we have a long car ride with the kids. Not just on a long road trip. I spy is the classic game for the car that almost everyone knows! But that doesn't mean it isn't still fun. It can be a great game to play with school-aged kids who are learning their letters and spelling, but you can also adjust the game to suit little kids by using colours instead of letters. How To Play: Take turns choosing something that you can see either within the car or outside the car windows and having everyone guess what it could be based on the first letter clue. For example, I spy with my little eye something beginning with T, which could be a tree. The person who guesses correctly has the next go. This is our favourite car game to play as a family. We have a lot of laughs at some of the more obscure answers if someone gets stuck (and do help each other out if we have extra answers). How To Play: Nominate a category, such as countries, girls names, food, movies, songs, etc. Go through the alphabet, starting at A, with each person coming up with an answer that fits the category for each letter of the alphabet, such as food, A could be apple, avocado, acorn etc. There are a few ways you can play this, depending on how challenging you want it to be or if you are playing with younger kids vs older kids, teens or adults. We dont keep scores but you can either give each person a point per letter they get an answer for or just give the point to the fastest responder per letter. Either way, its a lot of fun! This game is definitely better suited to older kids, teens and adults who have seen a lot of different movies. If playing with kids, it also helps to keep your answers suited to movies you know they have seen. How To Play: One player starts with Sorry Im late and then proceeds to give a reason based on the plot of a well-known film, while the others attempt to guess the movie. For example, Sorry Im late, I had to help a mermaid trade her voice for human legs. Answer The Little Mermaid. This is another great option for games to play in the car that can be adjusted to suit younger players, keeping it within their knowledge base but can be a real good challenge when playing with teens and adults. How To Play: Think of a character or famous person your fellow passengers should know of and have them take turns asking yes or no questions to reveal clues about the identity of the person. Whoever correctly guesses first leads the next round. Questions might be things such as Are you female?, Are you fictional?, Do you wear glasses?, Do you play sport?. This is a quick game that can be fun for younger kids especially. How To Play: Create your sundae by finding cars you pass in the right colours. Start with a cone, which would be any yellow car, then youre looking for your ice cream flavours: brown car (chocolate), white car (vanilla). Add your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), then top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your sprinkles (pink, purple or blue), the top off your s make sure you plan your colour sequence first so everyone knows what to look for. This is another fun game to play with movie buffs! How To Play: The first person names a different film that is somehow related to the first. It might be that they have the same genre, director or theme. You will need to be clear on the link before you take your turn! For example, The Croods Pokemon: Detective Pikachu (the link is Ryan Reynolds), Tomb Raider (th Rather road trip questions to play. How To Play: Take turns asking the group a Would you rather? question such as Would you rather eat ice cream or burgers?, Would you rather as such for this game but it is fun learning everyones preferences. If you have an older group of road-trippers, a bit of trivia can be a fun way to pass the time. You can either ask trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on things you already know, to see if the other members of your travel party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know the answers, or you can find trivia questions based on the party know tready know trivia questions based on the party know tr music and much more! A little like the alphabet game, this game does require you have either a piece of paper or a phone where you can make notes. How to Play: Have a list from A to Z and then as a family, look for town and city names that start with each letter of the alphabet. See if you can complete the list before you arrive at your destination. This is another simple game that doesnt require any equipment and will get each family member thinking. This is a memory game and you can play it with many different themes. How To Play: The first person starts off the shopping list at the letter A by saying, On my shopping list I have and then naming something beginning with Å, such as an apple The second person then repeats On my shopping list I have an apple, then adds something starting with the next letter, such as a banana for B. The next players named. The further into a banana for B. The next players named. the game you get, the harder it gets. For variations, instead of being grocery store items, you could make them things youre bringing to a party or items I am packing for vacation. Have the entire family in hysterics with this creative storytelling game. How To Play: The first player begins the story with an intro line, such as Once upon a time there was a purple cat named Fred. The second player then adds to the story, moving around to the rest of the players, in this mad lib sort of storytelling cycle. This is a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its a great activity to get everyones energy back up after some quiet time and its travel game for you. How To Play: Take turns to share a line or two of lyrics from a popular song that you would both know to see if the others can guess if. You can give points for correct guesses if you want to make it more competitive. This classic road trip game or waiting in line game is a good one for the kids (or adults) to play in the backseat if those in the front seat need a break. How To Play: For each round, players throw out either a rock (closed fist), paper (open palm) or scissors (two fingers). The winner is the one that beats their opponents sign, with rock beating paper and paper and paper beating rock. This can also be a fun way to settle disputes over what youre having for your next road trip meal or who gets the front seat next! You might find even more ideas for camping trips or some fun campervan games to pack. Some of the games we have included are similar but there are a few new ideas that could just as easily be played in cars too. If you have time to plan before you leave home on your next driving vacation, printable road trip games are a great inexpensive option that can be loads of fun. The options for printable car games for the kids, or fun car games bingo played with numbers, each person has a different road trip bingo grid with road trip-themed images or words, such as road signs, landmarks, and types of buildings. The first person to complete a line on their bingo grid is the winner. You can print off extra birngo cards so that each person can have a few rounds of gameplay. EXPERT TIP: Laminate your bingo boards before you leave home and bring dry-erase markers and wet wipes so you can rotate through the boards and reuse them again. After all, each stage of your drive is a little different! A road trip scavenger hunt is a little like bingo since you can still compete to see who completes their list first, or enjoy the game at your own pace and see if you can find everything on your list. The license plate game is another popular road trip activity, its basically a type of scavenger hunt based on the number plates of passing cars, however, there are a few different ways to play. We have included instructions for 2 different methods. A no prop version of the game and a state license plate game version. Have each person in the car choose a different number between 1 and 9. They must find a pair of their numbers to make a pair. For example, if your number is 7 and a car has the license plate 374, add the 3 and 4 to get 7 and that counts as a double. Each time you spot a double with your number, you get 2 points. If you spot a car with three of your number, i.e. 777, you get 3 points. The first person to 25 is the winner! This version of the game is popular if you are travelling somewhere that has a lot of different states, for example, through the USA. The goal is to mark off each states is a challenge but it makes it a fun game to play on and off throughout a longer road trip or as you spot them. You can also adapt it to places such as Australia, with far fewer states to find, or look for number plates from different countries around Europe and add them to a list to see how many countries you have at the end. Its definitely a game that can be adapted to suit how you want to play or where you are travelling to. There are plenty of other games you can play in the car alongside other road trip activities for kids. Make sure you check out tips above for choosing a good option since you dont want to end up with a mess all over the floor of the backseat by bringing a game with 100 pieces! Here are some other fun car ride games: Card Games: Card Games: Card games can be perfect for road trips since they dont take up hardly any space and can be easy to play in the backseat. Plus, there are so many different games that you can play with just a deck of cards. Hangman is a classic game that can be played with a piece of paper and pen, perfect for car rides. Guess the word before the stick figures are hung. Tic Tac Toe: Another simple game of strategy, tic-tac-toe requires just a piece of paper and pen or pencil. We called it noughts & crosses as kids. Maybe an Aussie thing? Board Games: Stick with board games that are simple to set up with few pieces if you do choose to bring any. Magnetic travel games are perfect alternatives to your classic board games from home. Puzzle search and any of these other word games and number games can be great in the car if you arent prone to car sickness from too much reading during long car rides (I am, unfortunately). If youre travelling with young children, or even if you are taking a couples road trip and need a little fun to pass the time, there are plenty of other simple activities and car games to play on a road trip that will help keep everyone happy in the car, without relying on devices the whole way. Here are a few of the ways we get ready for a trip:Keep the car organized with these 27 Track Hacks & Road Trip Tips The trip is going to be much longer than we thought 10 days through 11 states covering 2600 miles!! I know crazy! But were really looking forward to it we believe that family travel is a great way for kids to learn all kinds of things. Its going to be a monster of a trip with lots of overnight stops and quite a few hours in the car.Soooo . time to start planning on how to keep everyone busy, happy and fed Printable Travel Games for KidsIts the age-old question how to keep kids busy and engaged on long car rides?! The first thing I always tackle is putting together a binder for the trip thats chocked full of fun (& free) printable activities.Im telling you this little binder has been a huge help on our trips! The fact that our kids have had something to look forward to each morning when we load up the car is incentive enough for them to not drag their feet when we have to pack up. And its been wonderful to have a way to keep them writing and reading using fun activities on our trips. Ive included links below for each of the resources weve found including affiliate links for items that will help you put together your own road trip binder. Tips for Making a Road Trip Binder for kids, tweens or teens: 1. Include surprise activities they can do both on their own & with others in the car2. Find fun things that will keep them off the tech for a while3. Get the kids interested in the places were visiting on our trip because thats one of the reasons we travel, right?!First, print off a variety of travel games & activities!I search for games they really enjoy (for example, Mad Libs are a big hit with us right now) and fun pages like coloring or design printables.We also play the license plate game as a family every summer so thats a big one for us too! I look for maps & activities that highlight places on our travel journal pages. How to Organize Road Trip binder!One thing that works well for us is to sort the pages by travel day. This way, I know that each morning of our trip there will be new activities for our kids to do! I separate the printables using manila folders (which is great in case we want to pull out the items for one day). Then I use a 3 Hole Punch with all the printables & manila folders and insert them into the binder. Each set is labeled with the following to see. Every page of this road trip game contains fill-in the blank stories and no one knows where they will go until passengers shout out their verbs, adjectives, and nouns. For an extra fun time be sure to get a travel or road trip themed game (like Mad Libs on the Road). I spy with my little eye, something vellow. I Spy is a fun road trip game to keep kids entertained on a long car ride. The rules are simple: taking turns, one person spies something and describes it using a very simple idea. Something red or I spy something that starts with the letter C. Then others in the car take turns trying to guess what it is until someone guesses correctly. When playing I Spy on a road trip make sure to pick things that are always in view. A billboard that zooms by on the highway isnt ideal. Pick things in the horizon or things in the car, or play while out of the best road trip car games to play in the car. Write a bunch of questions on pieces of paper or index cards, and take turns picking questions then everyone in the car has to share their answer! For extra fun make sure all the questions are travel related! Having trouble thinking up questions to ask in the car, or pick up a deck of pre-written questions like the Shotqun!
