

Samaritan's Purse president Franklin Graham shares a special message this Easter from the Historic Lviv Market Square in Ukraine. The commercial-free, pre-recorded sermon will air on Fox News Channel at noon this Sunday — and will then be available for streaming at any time on Fox Nation. The event, presented by the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, will feature music by the Ukrainian Easter Choir and a message of hope from Graham himself. FOR PASSOVER, DENNIS PRAGER REVEALS THE REAL REASON THE JEWISH PEOPLE HAVE SURVIVED 3,500 YEARSThe sermon honors the extensive church history in Ukraine at a time — described by Graham — of "so much suffering" as Ukrainians endure war with Russia. Samaritan's Purse has about 160 service members and medical professionals working on the ground to support the Ukrainian people." I think it's important that, this Easter, we remember the people of Ukraine." Graham reminded listeners and worshippers not to forget the true meaning of Easter, which is the price that was paid for the "redemption of your soul" by God.CLICK HERE TO GET THE FOX NEWS APP"Easter is about our risen savior. It's about an empty tomb." The faith leader took the time to lead all listeners to invite God into their hearts and encouraged them to continue prayer through the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association prayer line. The National Prayer Breakfast is a yearly event held in Washington, D.C., usually on the first Thursday in February. The founder of this event was Abraham Vereide.[1] The event—which is actually a series of meetings, luncheons, and dinners—has taken place since 1953. and has been held at least since the 1980s at the Washington Hilton on Connecticut Avenue NW. The National Prayer Breakfast, held in the Hilton's International Ballroom, is yearly attended by some 3,500 guests, including international Ballroom. organized on their behalf by the Christian organization Fellowship Foundation.[2] It is designed to be a forum for the political, social, and business elite to assemble and pray together. Since the inception of the National Prayer Breakfast, several U.S. states and cities and other countries have established their own annual prayer breakfast events. The National Prayer Breakfast split from the Fellowship Foundation) in 2023 due to recent controversies and questions regarding the transparency of the coordination of the event. There was a letter signed by 30 groups to boycott the event.[3] The Congress will take over the coordination of the event starting in 2023. The origin of the National Prayer Breakfast is traced back to prayer groups with business and civic leaders in Seattle, organized by Abraham Vereide in the 1930s. When he moved to Washington, DC, he established similar groups with members of Congress. In 1953, President Dwight D. Eisenhower attended a meeting by invitation of Congressmen, Vereide, and Billy Graham. Vereide, and Billy Graham. Vereide as saying that the Breakfast and Coe's influence offers foreign leaders access to the President that "circumvents the State Department and usual vetting... that such a meeting would require," and other participants indicated that their purpose for attending was political.[4] Initially called the Presidential Prayer Breakfast, the name was changed in 1970 to the National Prayer Breakfast. Every American president since Dwight D. Eisenhower has participated in the annual event. Benazir Bhutto, former prime minister of Pakistan, participated on more than one occasion, and a video interview of her speaking about the National Prayer Breakfast, its meaning and its impact on her faith, was featured at the 2008 closing dinner. In 2006, King Abdullah II of Jordan addressed the Thursday lunch. Ricardo Maduro, president of Honduras, addressed the same lunch in 2005. Musical guests have included Andrea Bocelli, Wintley Phipps, Michael W. Smith, Point of Grace, and CeCe Winans. In 2014, for the first time since Ukraine's Independence, The Patriarch of The Ukrainian Orthodox Church, Patriarch Philaret was present. In 2015, the Dalai Lama addressed the International Lunch, one of the annual National Prayer Breakfast-related events. Rev. Jim Wallis, founder and president of the Christian social change group Sojourners and a regular attendee of the National Prayer Breakfast, said of the event "it's sort of a time to — where people want to acknowledge the importance of prayer and faith. And that can be kind of a civil religion, civic faith kind of common denominator thing. Or it can be much too sectarian where some people feel left out of it. I remember my favorite ones are when Bono spoke at the prayer breakfast and talked about every faith tradition calls us to stand with those who are left out, left behind. I remember Senator Mark Hatfield spoke years ago when I was in seminary and he called the war in Vietnam a national sin and shame in front of Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger. I saw their faces and they weren't happy with that. So when it can raise up issues that we ought to be accountable to, whether we are religious or not, I think that's when it's probably at its best."[24] In 2010, Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington asked President Barack Obama and Congressional leaders to refrain from attending the National Prayer Breakfast. Executive Director Melanie Sloan criticized the organizing group, The Fellowship, for being what she described as intolerant and secretive.[25] Over the years, other watchdog groups, like the Freedom From Religion Foundation, also criticize the opacity, and maintain the NPB, launched to oppose FDR's New Deal policies, is a Christian nationalist movement, pretends to be bipartisan, and uses unwitting Democrats for cover and legitimacy.[26][27] Interview of the secretive.[25] Over the years, other watchdog groups, like the Freedom From Religion Foundation, also criticize the opacity, and maintain the NPB. 2023, various groups - religious and secular, Black, LGBTQ - lobbied President Joe Biden to break tradition and cut ties with the event.[27] On Thursday, February 6, 2020, President Donald J. Trump addressed the gathering, including these statements encouraging freedom of religion and appreciation for those attending, citing their bravery, brilliance, and fortitude: "But I'll tell you what we are doing: We're restoring hope and spreading faith. We're helping citizens of every background take part in the great rebuilding of our nation. We're helping citizens of every background take part in the great rebuilding of our nation. We're helping citizens of every background take part in the great rebuilding of our nation. right now."[28] Also in 2020, the event marked the highest level state visit by a Republic of China (Taiwan) official since 1979 when Vice-president Lai Ching-te attended the National Prayer Breakfast is featured in the Netflix miniseries The Family, from the book The Family: The Secret Fundamentalism at the Heart of American Power. The Australian National Prayer Breakfast is hosted by the Parliamentary Christian Fellowship with the support of a small organising committee. Journalist Jeff Sharlet believes that American congressmen were writing to counterparts in Australia in the 1960s, encouraging their own event. [30] In time, the Parliamentary Christian Fellowship, started by Kim Beazley Sr. and Mervyn Lee, launched the first Australian Prayer Breakfast in 1986.[31] Key organisers and prominent participants have included Bruce Baird had and figures with links with the Fellowship such as brothers Jock Cameron and Ross Cameron.[32][33] Prominent speakers at the National Prayer Breakfast and associated side events include Mark Scott, Major General Michael Jeffery, Cardinal George Pell and Tim Costello.[34][35] For the 2019 Australian National Prayer Breakfast people were invited to bring their MP because of Paul's call to "pray for all those in authority".[36] From that time, Leon Hribar has helped organize the Australian National Prayer Breakfast.[37] The National Parliament APPG; it is not associated with the US NPB. The event normally takes place over two days around the beginning of July, inside the Houses of Parliament. The main breakfast is normally held in Westminster Hall.[38] President Ronald Reagan and Nancy Reagan greet Billy Graham at the Washington Hilton, 1981. President George W. Bush, Laura Bush, and Sen. He was born William Franklin Graham, Jr., on Thursday, November 7th, 1918 on a dairy farm near Charlotte, North Carolina, to Morrow (Coffey) and William Franklin Graham, who were dairy farmers. Billy was an unofficial pontifex maximus to the American Republic, from the Truman Administration to the Obama years. Graham served as a spiritual adviser to several American presidential inauguration from 1948 to 1996, and was presented with a Congressional Gold Medal by his fellow Southern Baptist, Bill Clinton, in 1996.As a radio and TV evangelist, Graham touched the lives of an estimated two billion people. He personal savior at his revival meetings. The Gallup Poll listed him as number seven on its list of the most admired people of the 20th century. Graham was a moderate and temperate preacher with a high level of tolerance. His split with Bob Jones, Sr. circa 1950 was the watershed moment of the divergence of evangelicals, like Graham, from fundamentalists, like Jones. Do you or someone you know need prayer? >>Call the 24/7 Billy Graham Prayer Line at 888-388-2683. A year ago this month, the pandemic threw many people into full-blown panic. One year ago, on March 17, calls started trickling in to the 24-hour Billy Graham Prayer Line. As the world turned on end, many realized their need for something bigger than themselves. Since then, trained volunteers and staff have answered more than 430,000 times. The prayer line is one of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA)'s newest ministries. Prayer line Manager Jonathan Edwards said the response has been incredible. "I love the fact that we've been able to point people to Jesus versus living in a pandemic with Christ." 1-888-388-2683 24 hours a day, 7 days a week CONTACT US Many callers hear about the ministry from Franklin Graham's TV commercials. Since the first one aired on March 23, 2020, he's shared the Gospel and invited people to call for prayer 12,000 times and counting. On the flip side, it's been a powerful resource for believers. Someone from South Dakota asked permission to put the toll-free number on billboards. A racing ministry asked to share the number. Counseling centers that couldn't open because of COVID-19 referred their clients. The need is definitely still there, Edwards said. Volunteers and staff are averaging 1,300 to 1,500 calls in 24 hours. "We have an army of people ready to share the Gospel day and night." them to Jesus and pray with them." —Jonathan Edwards "When people hear they can have an actual conversation, they're more likely to call," he confirmed. "We always want to make sure we have a live person on the other end." Keeping the line staffed is challenging at times, he admitted. But volunteers are committed, making this their personal ministry. Even before getting on the phone lines, they're spending time in prayer, Edwards said. Callers often share deep burdens, and volunteers and staff call it a privilege to tell them "God loves you and will forgive you." Not every caller is pleasant, however—some just call in to vent. Whatever prompts each call, they're hearing God's Word. There are a couple of stories from the past year that stand out to Edwards. In March, the caller ID indicated the call came from a liquor store. The person was on speaker phone and began asking questions. The prayer line representative shared the call came from a liquor store. prayed to do so. In another instance, a boy and his grandmother were walking down a wooded trail when they spotted a rock with writing on it. Looking closer, they saw a phone number. Calling it, they talked to the volunteer and the young man decided to pray and ask Jesus into his heart. "In an isolated society, we've been a connection point for a lot of folks," Edwards said. "Many have found comfort just having someone listen and pray with them." By simply picking up the phone, thousands have made spiritual decisions for Christ and heard about His forgiveness and grace. "People are desperately looking for someone to point them to Jesus and pray with them." Edwards said. "To continue ministering in a year when the BGEA couldn't do ministry in our normal, traditional way has been a blessing. "In a really crazy year, God provided." Have questions about faith? She feared divorce and wanted to know what were the pillars of a strong marriage. These are the words he penned. One of the pillars for a strong marriage is prayer. When you pray together as a couple, not only are you acknowledging that your marriage consists of you, your spouse, and God, but you are also seeking His involvement in your life, together. You are being of one mind as well as continuing to be equally yoked with your spouse. (Philippians 2:20, 2 Corinthians 6)As you pray daily, read the Bible, and attend church together you reinforce the foundation of faith in your lives and marriage. You learn from each other.
