Tie your shoelace before jogging. Tennis is her favorite sport. The walrus has huge tusks. He said "Yes!" after being chosen for the job. Last December I was sad because my favorite baseball team lost in a tournament. You should have seen my face, it looked like someone erased my smile. To cheer me up my dad took me out on our sailboat. It was a little messy so we took some sandwiches, soup, and juice and left the house early on Saturday morning. We spent a few hours sailing around the lake. It was relaxing to just sit and listen to the water against the boat and soak up some sun. Dad told me he was sorry about the baseball team losing. "They will have more chances to win in the future," he said. I told him I wasn't too sad anymore. "I just really wanted them to win," I said. Dad suggested that we sing the team song. He thought that would help us get excited for next years tournament. "Next year we will sit outside on the grass behind the fence to watch the game," dad said. "We can take some salad, popsicles, and your toy dinosaurs. It will be the most fun we've ever had at a baseball game." I love my dad. He is so good at helping me be happy. No-Kissing ClubKissing is gross. It makes me sick. On Valentine's Day my dad gave my mom some sunflowers in a glass vase. But that wasn't all. He also bought her a new purse, a bracelet, and a red dress. Mom was so excited about all of her gifts that she threw her arms around dad and gave him a big kiss. Yuck! It's one thing for them to say that they love each other all the time, but the kissing is too much for me. I have decided to start a club called "Anything But Lips" for people like me who don't like kissing. I posted a sign outside and told all of my friends to come. We are going to meet in my dad's office once a week at six o'clock. We will talk about anything that is not related to kissing. I have put a list of different topics together that we will discuss which includes: grasshoppers, motorcycle's, seat belts, soccer, tennis, soup, car racing, and insects, to name a few. Before I will let them come in the office, everyone will have to sign a contract saying they won't talk about kissing. We have our first meeting tomorrow. I hope some people come. The Ice HotelMy family and I want to see the ice house. It is really called "IceHotel", but I call it the ice house. It is located in a small town in Sweden called "Jukkasjarvi", I don't know how to say it but that's o.k. Everything inside of it is made of ice. Really! There are ice sculptures, ice beds, ice walls, an ice roof, ice chairs, ice couches, and even an ice restaurant. People get married there, see the Northern Lights, snowmobiling, dog-sledding, and learn how to ice sculpt. It looks like so much fun, if you don't mind the cold. Some of my friends have wondered how someone would sleep on a bed of ice. I told them you sleep on a bed of ice the same way you sleep on your bed at home...with blankets! I have wondered if the hotel has ice showers with ice soap but my mom told me it would be too cold for people to do that. I did read that they have a sauna in one of the deluxe rooms though. Our family is going to save our money this year so we can go to Sweden in December and experience everything the ice hotel has to offer
We are so excited that we have already started packing! Return to Top of S Words Page scaffoldscarecrowscaryschedulescholarschoolhousescooterscoreboardscorecardScotlandscoutingscubasculpturescurriedskateboardskierskiingskyscraper4

Scarlet had been scared to ski since high school. It had been 3 years since her skiing accident. She twisted her knee while skiing down a steep hill. She still didn't remember what had gone wrong. All she remembered was that she was wearing her red scarf, black ski mask, and sky blue snow coat. She had brought a basket with some home made biscuits for her and her friend Skip to eat at lunch. As she skiied down the hill she remembered one ski caught an edge in the snow and the next thing she knew her knee was in a lot of pain and she was being rescued by the ski patrol. While she was in the hospital, the doctor asked her a few questions about how she was skiing on the hill. She remembered he had a deep husky voice. He told her that skiing accidents happen all the time and sometimes for no reason. As she sat at her work desk she rubbed her knee just thinking about how bad it had hurt. She wanted to ski again, but she couldn't escape the fear of hurting her knee again. She didn't want to give it up. She decided she would go skiing the coming weekend. "If I take it easy and go with a friend, maybe I can get past being scared," she thought. Adventurous

Skylar why she scuba dives because you can't feel the wind in your face under water. She just smiled and simply said "I like the water in my face, as long as I have my mask on, it feels good on my whiskers." I asked Skylar how she learned to do these types of sports. She told me she has been interested in ice skating since she was in preschool. As she got older she began to water ski and scuba dive. "I only started sky diving last year after I finished high school," she said. I asked her where she gets the money to pay for these sports. She told me she works two jobs. She sells biscuits and other breads at the bakery during the day. At night she makes computer desks and sells them to furniture stores. Skylar works hard and she plays hard too. I told her to have fun and be careful. When I asked him how he knew so much he smiled and said he was given a book at Christmas 10 years ago. The title of the book was "Everything You Need to Know About Locksmithing". "It isn't a small book," he said. He has learned everything he knows from that book.Of course, he still has to be learned from reading. I should start reading some of the books I have in my basement.Dumb RobberAs the policeman looked at the crime seen he saw some clues. The robber who had broken into the house was not that smart. He had smashed the window to unlock the door wasn't locked. The handle had just been replaced by the locksmith and didn't have a lock on it. Then the robber had made himself a smoothie and left fingerprints all over the blender the glass he drank the smoothie out of, and the placeman had fingerprints and a shoe size. The policeman followed the footprints past the Christmas tree. The robber had knocked some of the ornaments off so the policeman could tell that he went down the stairs to the basement. The home owner was a businessman who worked out of his basement office. When he reached the basement office. When he reached the basement office were pictures of the home owner playing baseball. Judging by the pictures the policeman thought that the home owner was a first baseman. The policeman saw a small ashtray on the home owner was a first baseman. The policeman more evidence to catch him. "This will be an easy case to solve," he thought, as he walked back upstairs. longest races and finished in first and second place. One time, someone asked them the question "How did you become such good runners?" Both of them had different statements. Steve said "I follow a constant and consistent training program and meal plan. I use a stopwatch to time my speed every race and I try to beat that speed everytime. "Dusty said "I run stairs everyday in the football stadium for thirty minutes without stopping. I can run long distances because I have established endurance in my lungs and muscles." A woman came from the TV station wanted to ask them more guestions like when they started running and how they became interested in it. Steve said "My grandpa told me stories about himself when he was a runner and that is what interested me in it." Dusty said "When I was a middle school student, I was always restless at night. I started falling asleep during the day. Running helped me stay calm, stop being anxious, and go to sleep. If I felt restless, I would go on a short run, and afterward, I would go right to sleep at night."The woman from the TV station told them they were fantastic runners and wished them good luck on their next race. Steve and Dusty thanked the woman and headed to the shoe store to buy some new running shoes. This post contains 160 S words in initial, medial, and final positions of words to help you practice saying the S sound. These are great to reference at school, at home, or on the go! About the S sound is a fricative sound in the English language. It is produced by pulling the lips back into a smile and placing the tongue just behind the front teeth, producing a hissing sound. The S sound should be acquired by 5 years old. If a child has difficulty saying the S sound, it may be beneficial to seek out the expertise of a speech therapist. How to Say the S sound Many children and individuals mispronounce the S sound. Here is how to correctly make the S sound. Here is how to correctly make the S sound the front teeth almost touching the alveolar ridge (the roof of the mouth right behind the top teeth). The tongue does not touch the teeth or stick out between the teeth when producing the S sound. Pull the lips back. The lips should be pulled back, almost forming a smile. Push air over the tongue and the top of the alveolar ridge. The air should meet some resistance when doing this. This causes S to sound like a hissing/snake sound. Turn the voice off. S is a voiceless sound, meaning you turn off your voice (the vocal folds do NOT vibrate) when you say the sound. This causes S to sound like a hissing/snake sound. When Does the S Sound bevelop? The S sound should be produced correctly by the time a child turns 5 years old. However, many children will continue to learn how to correctly say S after this age. For more information on speech development, check out this post all about Speech Sound Development. Common errors when producing S include the following: Frontal lisp. The tongue is placed between the top and bottom teeth making a TH sound instead of an S sound. This might sound like someone saying thock instead of sock.Lateral lisp. Air escapes through the sides of the tongue and through the front of the tongue and through the front of the mouth. This creates a slushy sound by itself), you can move on to practicing S in syllables. Syllables include the sound plus a vowel (Say, See, Sigh, etc.). After syllables have been mastered, children can begin practicing S in words. Thats where these S words come in extremely handy! S Words Even though the S sound is a very common sound in English, it can be tricky to produce correctly. With the right instruction and help from a professional (like

The s sound is a voiceless alveolar fricative, which means that it is produced by forcing air through a narrow opening between the tongue and the alveolar ridge, creating a friction-like noise. In speech therapy, the s sound is sometimes referred to as the voiceless alveolar sibilant or simply the sibilant. To produce the s sound, you can start by placing the tip of your tongue flat and your lips relaxed, and exhale air through your mouth while forcing the air between your tongue and the alveolar ridge to create the fricative sound. It is important to note that the sound and have your child watch your lips and mouth movements. Explain that the sound is
