Medicare part b employer information form

Medicare, like most federal programs created to give benefits and opportunities to eligible recipients, is a program for American citizens. One of the requirements to be eligible to receive and enjoy Medicare coverage is to have United States citizenship or to be a permanent resident of the United States. However, there is one circumstance in which you may be able to qualify for Medicare even if you are not a U.S. citizen or permanent resident. Medicare has four different parts of health coverage. Most American citizens are automatically enrolled in Part A and Part B of Medicare at the age of 65, and if they have paid Medicare tax, they are entitled to receive Part A coverage for free. As a non-citizen, you are not entitled to receive free coverage from Part A, since one of the requirements is to be a U.S. citizen. You are also not allowed to purchase Part A coverage. However, if you are not eligible to receive Part A (which is the case of a non-citizen individual), you are allowed to purchase Medicare Part B and pay monthly premiums for its coverage. Medicare Part B is also known as medical insurance. Part B helps to pay for the basic medical costs you have, such as doctor visits, preventive care and basic medical treatments. If you are a non-citizen, you can purchase Medicare Part B under specific conditions. You are required to be 65 years of age or older. You also are required to prove that you were legally admitted to the United States and that your status is still legal at the moment of applying for Part B. Along with that, you must have lived in the United States for at least five consecutive years. Medicare Part D is a part of Medicare coverage that focuses on paying the costs for prescription drugs. Medicare Part D requires payment of monthly premiums to all its members, and prices vary according to coverage and the member's income. To buy Part D, a person needs to have Medicare Part A or Part B. As a non-citizen, you are allowed to buy Medicare Part B if you meet the requirements. If you do so and you also desire to purchase Part D, you may, since having Part B (or Part A) is the only requirement for purchasing Part D. As a non-citizen, you have to pay monthly premiums for Medicare Part B and Part D. How much you pay in premiums depends upon your level of income. You are required to pay higher premiums for Part B if your income falls into higher levels. As of 2011, if you file your tax return as married jointly, and if your income is higher than $170,000, you have to pay higher premiums for Parts B and D. If you have any other filing status, and if your income is higher than $85,000, you also must pay higher premiums. Content created by Digital Communications Division (DCD)Content last reviewed on September 16, 2014 Question: I signed up for Medicare Part A when I turned 65, but I didn't enroll in Part B because I was still working and had health insurance from my employer. But now I'm 68, and I plan to retire later this year. What do I need to do to enroll in Medicare Part B, and when do I need to do it?Answer:Many people who are still working just sign up for Medicare Part A at 65 (because it's free) and delay signing up for Part B while they're covered by their employer's insurance. But you must sign up for Medicare Part B no later than eight months after you leave your job and lose that coverage, or else you could get hit with a lifetime penalty and a gap in coverage.You can't sign up online because your employer needs to provide proof that until now you had coverage at work. You can submit the paperwork by mail or in person at your local Social Security office. You will need to fill out the following forms: CMS-40B Application for Enrollment in Medicare Part B and, because you worked past 65, CMS-L564 Request for Employment Information, to be filled out by your employer. If you've had more than one job with health coverage since you turned 65, you'll need each employer to fill out a separate form.It will probably take the Social Security Administration a while to process the paperwork. Tatiana Fassieux, California Health Advocates board chair, recommends mailing your application or making an appointment with Social Security at least two months before you retire to ensure that your Part B coverage begins the first month you're officially retired. The Social Security office can also give you a letter of eligibility or enrollment so you can start looking for a medigap policy, and for a Medicare Part D prescription plan or a Medicare Advantage plan, she says.Keep in mind that only health insurance from a current employer counts as eligible coverage for delaying Medicare sign-up. If you have retiree health coverage or if you continue your employer's coverage through COBRA, you'll still need to sign up for Medicare Part B within eight months of leaving your job, says Medicare advocate Sue Greeno, of the Center for Medicare Advocacy.You can get help with the process from your local State Health Insurance Assistance Program (see the SHIP resource page for links to your state contacts).
