Firex to Kidde Adapter allows users to easily upgrade their existing smoke alarm systems by replacing Firex models with Kidde products, eliminating the need for rewiring the entire system.Kidde smoke detectors are reliable, but it's essential to know when and how often they should be replaced to ensure optimal performance and safety in your home. A Kidde CO alarm typically lasts between seven to ten years, depending on the model type, and it's crucial to replace them before their end-of-life warning. Similarly, Firex smoke detectors need to be replaced at least every 10 years due to worn-out sensor technology. However, if you don't see a label indicating the detector's age, it's best to err on the side of caution and replace it.###ARTICLETo replace your old alarm with a new Kidde alarm, start by replacing the mounting bracket on your ceiling with the included new one. Next, install the KA-F2 Quick Convert Adapter and attach your existing wiring harness to the Kidde alarm. Once all alarms are re-installed, power them back up and test each unit to ensure proper operation. Refer to your user manual for specific instructions and guidance throughout the process.Additionally, be aware that connecting Kidde products to non-compatible systems or using non-approved equipment may result in nuisance alarms, failure to sound, or damage to the devices. Always check compatibility before making connections.Some popular interconnect-compatible models include those from Firex, First Alert, and BRK brands. However, if your unit is not listed as compatible, it should be replaced with a current Kidde model. For previously owned FireX smoke alarms, consider using the Kiddie's Convert Adapter to enable compatibility with new Kidde alarms.The Kidde Quick Connect Smoke Detector Adapter is designed to make installing hardwired detectors easier and quicker, allowing users to connect new detectors to existing wiring harnesses or other interconnected systems.
